

The Mexican paper trail

Before India asks you for anything, Mexico does. Six items, verified as documents in Phase 2.

01 THE SIX DOCUMENTS

- 1 • CRT certification, current, for the exact SKUs you will export.
- 2 • NOM number, printed on every label: the mark of authenticity.
- 3 • CAET, the export certificate, issued per shipment by category, class, alcohol strength and brand; a maximum of four bottle sizes per certificate. Every export needs a fresh one.
- 4 • IMPI trademark, registered; plus a Convenio de Corresponsabilidad approved through IMPI wherever the brand owner is not the producer.
- 5 • Padron de Exportadores Sectorial, SAT's sectoral exporter registry for alcoholic beverages, before anything ships under your name.
- 6 • Bottler registry, CRT registration with quarterly reports of all tequila movements and inventories.

02 THE PER-SHIPMENT RHYTHM

Request by lot. The CAET covers only the lot being sold, so every shipment starts with a fresh application by category, class, strength and brand.

Verification. A CRT verifier inspects at the sampling site before the certificate is endorsed; the commercial invoice is uploaded to match the application.

Plan the days. Build the certificate cycle into every delivery promise you make to an Indian buyer. Late paper, late boat.

03 WHO NEEDS THE CONVENIO

If you distil your own brand: your producer registration covers you.

If a third party distils it: the Convenio between you and the Authorized Producer, validated through IMPI, is a precondition for the export certificate. This is the item most often missing.

04 YOUR PHASE 2 FOLDER

Scan and collect now: CRT certificate, a current NOM-marked label, a CAET example if you have exported, IMPI registration (and Convenio if applicable), Padron proof, and one recent CoA.

Common gaps we see: a lapsed certificate for one SKU in the range, a Convenio still unsigned, and Padron enrolment assumed to be the broker's problem. Check all three before Session 3.

THE POINT

Phase 2 verifies documents, not answers. Start the folder this week; whoever arrives at Session 3 with papers is two weeks ahead by August.
